GLOBAL ECONOMY & THE FUTURE

The technology is likely to have the greatest impact on the future of the world economy has arrived, and it's not crypto trading self-driving cars, solar energy, or artificial intelligence. It's called the blockchain. Given the promise and peril of such a disruptive technology, many firms in the financial industry, from banks and insurers to audit and professional service firms, are investing in blockchain solutions. What is driving this deluge of money and interest? Most firms cite opportunities to reduce friction and costs. After all, most financial intermediaries themselves rely on a dizzying, complex, and costly array of intermediaries to run their own operations. Santander, a European bank, put the potential savings at $20 billion a year Capgemini, a consultancy, estimates that consumers could save up to $16 billion in banking and insurance fees each year through blockchain-based applications.

OUR REACH

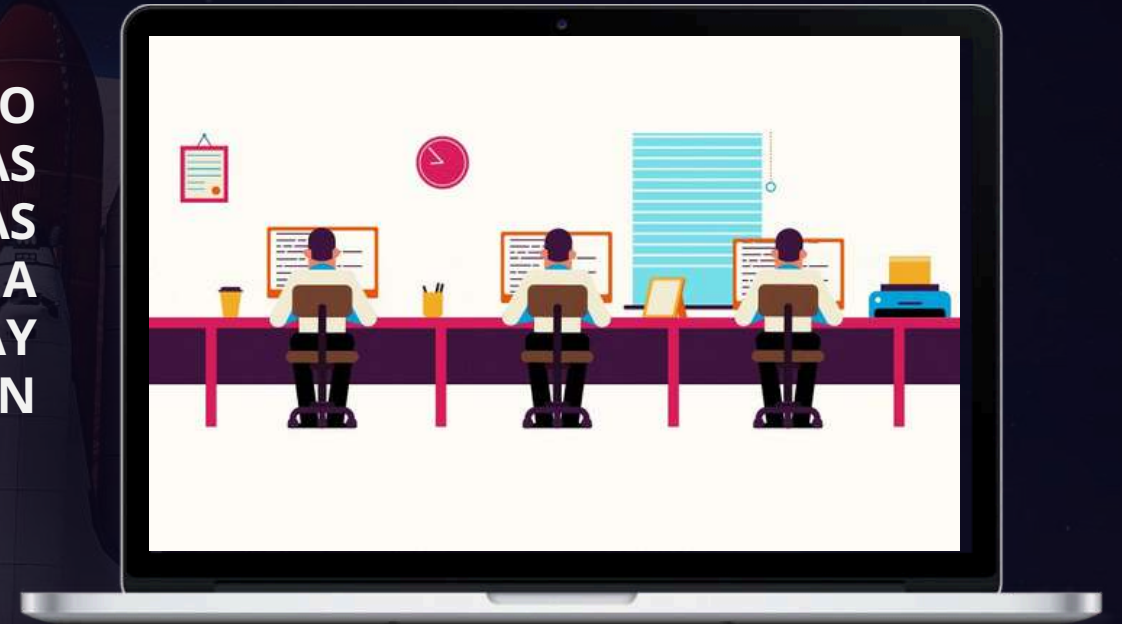

CRYPTO ADOPTION ON RISE GLOBAL CRYPTO MARKET CAP - $2.4 TRILLION

● 2020-21 will be known for massive Intuitional interest in blockchain space. To be sure, blockchain may enable incumbents such as JPMorgan Chase, Citigroup, and Credit Suisse, Tesla, Alphabet Incorporation, Facebook, all of which are currently investing in the technology, to do more with less, streamline their businesses, and reduce risk in the process. But while an opportunistic viewpoint is advantageous and often necessary, it is rarely sufficient

● The global pandemic has only accelerated the growing trend of making payments online, meaning more and more people are beginning to realize the benefits of a token-based economy. In a recent survey, 74% of respondents believed that cryptocurrency is a viable alternative to the traditional monetary systems, and with increased mainstream media coverage about the benefits of cryptocurrency, this interest is likely to grow amongst the general population..
